quotes the following from the new rules:

16. (b) A player is put OFF-SIDE if he is in the line of scrimmage when the ball is snapped. The penalty is 5 yards.

17. (c) The player being OFF-SIDE is put OFF-SIDE only when the ball has been snapped.

This sounds very clear, but Mr. Bell,

In Excitement Public Fails to See Violation of Rules that Occur While Players
Are in a Jumbled Mass.

TO lovers of American sport, even to those who never miss a game, the rules of intercollegiate football are the most intricate. This is largely due to the fact that the players frequently are in a jumbled mass of a hundred yards from the spectator and the "inside" plays cannot be seen. Another reason is that not enough games are seen in a season for an ordinary spectator to become thoroughly familiar with the rules.

The new rules were intended to make the game more open and give the public a clearer insight as to what is going on, but even that has its limitation.

What was he brought back for? "What was he brought back for?" "What was he brought back for?" "What was he brought back for?"

These fights should be fast ones.

There should be some great fighting at the National A. C. of Philadelphia to-night, as Tommy Sullivan, of Lawrence, Mass., will meet Billy Burke, of Philadelphia, who is a heavy-weight champion.

Gridiron Decisions with Which Crowd May Not Be Familiar

Penalty.
15 Yards—For holding in the line, i. e., blocking an opponent in a scrimmage, other than the runner with the ball, by catching him with the hands.

15 Yards—For piling up after ball has been declared "down" by the referee, or for tackling a runner outside of bounds.

5 Yards—For being offside when ball is put in play. A player is offside when he is beyond the line of the ball when it is snapped back by the center rush. This is one of the most common offenses.

Loss of Ball.—For making forward pass by side which did not put the ball in play.

Loss of Ball.—For a player who is offside touching the ball.

15 Yards—For tackling a player who has signified his intention of making a fair catch.

Bringing Back Ball After a Run.—Because runner broke from scrimmage and ran with ball after referee's whistle had blown ordering the ball "down" or "dead." This is a very common offense.

CHAMPION GANS TO RETIRE FROM RING

"Yes, I am going to fight Kid Herman at Tonopah, Nev., on Jan. 1, and that will be my last fight," said Joe Gans, the champion light-weight boxer, in Baltimore the other night. "There will be only one possibility of my going into the ring again; that is if Bartlett Nelson really wants to fight me and will make terms to suit me. I mean by this not such terms as will give me every advantage, as was given him at Goldfield, but anything that is fair, square and equitable. Yes, I would be more than glad to fight him again. After that it is good-bye to the ring for Joe Gans."

"My reason for retiring is, first, that I have now enough money to keep me all the rest of my days. When you consider that I have been fighting for more than half of my life, and do not have to keep it up, you cannot blame me for going out of the game at the top-notch of success and before reverses come with advancing years."

"After next week's show I shall return to San Francisco and will follow up my efforts to enjoy the pictures. I will get there about Dec. 1, and four days later will be in Tonopah and start to train for Kid Herman."

Among the assets of Gans are 1,000 shares of gold mining stock presented to him by the miners of Goldfield. When he got them they were worth $25 a share, or $25,000. They have since gone up to $150 a share, and their worth is now $375,000.

'WIZARD' STILL AFTER TITLE

Word comes from Chicago to-day to the effect that Jacob Schaefer, the wizard of billiards, is soon to challenge for both the 181 and 183 world's championship billiard emblems. The announcement, coming at this time, will send a thrill of interest through the billiard world, for it means a continuance of big match games between the leading experts through the billiard season.

Each team has won every game thus far this season, and if the Shakespeare expect to have a walkover they will receive a rude jolt. The Lowells have won the championship in baseball and in debating and are out on the war-path to capture the third championship and then be the all-round champions of the Educational Alliance Interclub League.
